SUBURB DRAMA

Live theatre on the stage of "The Institute Theatre" has been very much part of the life and tradition of "The Suburb" since 1920. As we stride towards our 100th production in October 1985, we look back with pleasure, not only at our own past — the plays — the People — but also that of our parent societies "The Play and Pageant Union" and "The Speedwell Players" and we look forward with antiicipation to our coming Season. We start with William Shakespeare's "Merchant of Venice" which needs no introduction and then in December we present "The Servant" by Robin Maugham, which many may remember as an outstanding film. A new pantomime "There was an Old Woman" by Terry Rodgers, "Say Goodnight to Grandma" by Colin Welland follow and the production in Little Oakwood. JW

BROOKLANDS SUMMER FAIR

Cllr. Roy Shutz, Mary Gallagher and PC Crowther.

ODDS GET EVEN FOR SECOND YEAR RUNNING

The eighth annual cricket match between teams from opposite sides of the road in Northway, Hampstead Garden Suburb was won by the Odds on the Heath Extension on Sunday, 15 July.

Following a torrential downpour a last minute decision to stage a full match was made by Captains David Lewis (Odds) and Richard Malnick (Evens) when a drenched contingent of 10 diehards met at 2.15pm. When the sun started shining again the less hardy residents of the road emerged to enjoy an exciting finish to the match.

The Odds batted first and made a record 82 in their allotted 19.4 overs. Former captain of the Evens, David Atwell, who made the journey from Oxford to guest for his former team tore the heart out of the Odds early innings with three wickets. Star of last year's match, William Lewis, was clean bowled by the Evens new demon bowler, David Van Gelder. However, an excellent partnership between David Lewis (12 not out) and David Cohen (18 not out) shored up the innings, leaving the Brennan brothers to score some

On 7 July it was the turn of the Friends of Brooklands Infant School to mount their fund raising Summer Fair. Organised by Mary Gallagher, in her last year as Chairman, the Fair made a record profit, £1,628.

A very lively scene was made all the more colourful by the fact that it seemed that all the children wore fancy dress. PC Crowther and the headmistress, Mrs. J. Green, judged the competition.

Mary Gallagher paid tribute to the many parents who put so much effort into providing entertainment, food and the cool drinks that were so much appreciated on a very hot day. RJW

Kay and Warren Smith from Linden Lea help Toby into his spectacular space outfit.

What better than cool melons on hot day?

Brian Gallagher, always energetic!
