

RA Centenary Arts Festival success

Painter Monica Winner said, "It's wonderful to be able to talk to other artists and meet so many nice people." Monica was talking at the RA Centenary Creative Arts Festival where, along with 38 other artistic residents, she was exhibiting her work for the weekend. From Katharine Cheng's cake decoration to Morris Cohen's sculpture the standard was very high. We had portraits – Lord Howie by Annie Walker and Judy Bermant's sensitive portrayal of her late husband, Chaim and landscapes in plenty. Anna Kochiokada's jewellery was stunning, Anne Lowe's rag rugs were fun and the homemade cakes were exceedingly good. Thanks to all at the Free Church for organising a really good Suburb event.

Sugar flower demo from Katharine Cheng

Patricia Larsen's bold landscapes

Japanese flower arranging...

... or you could just get lost in book

Brooklands School campaigns for the worldwide 'sisterhood'

Brookland Infant and Nursery School is supporting the 'Send my Sister to School' campaign to help highlight the fact that over 35 million girls globally are missing out on an education.

To support 'Send My Sister to School' Brookland pupils have been making 'sister' figures and adding their messages in speech bubbles.

Here Mike Freer MP visited the school in July to receive the work pupils have been producing. Two of the pupils have been invited by Mike Freer to present their messages at 10 Downing Street.

If you would like more information about the 'Send my Sister to School' campaign visit www.sendmyfriend.org.

Fun for all at the RA Centenary Picnic

The Ham & High takes a picture – and it's on film at <http://youtu.be/3PH1nUho2w>

22 years of successfully selling & renting in hampstead garden suburb

Balloon hats were popular

The chairman serves the drinks while Tony Brand is in danger of running out of puff

The June event is the Page's plant sale in aid of the Hospice in Wordsworth Walk